Diego Rivera painted “Sueño de una tarde dominical en la Alameda Central” --- Catrina (the rich), Frida Kahlo and Diego – for Día de los Muertos. Key Mexican historical figures are depicted, including La Malinche, in the center. La Malinche was the daughter of an Aztec cacique, captured by Cortes. She became his lover, translator and helped him conquer the Aztec and Mayan lands. La Malinche has come to mean betrayal and treachery and is memorialized in the Mexican ballad La Llorona, a wailing song of spirits of the dead, on Día de los Muertos.

Day of the Dead originated several thousand years ago with the Aztec, Toltec, and other Nahua people, who considered mourning the dead disrespectful. For these pre-Hispanic cultures, death was a natural phase in life’s long continuum. The dead were still members of the community, kept alive in memory and spirit—and during Día de los Muertos, they temporarily returned to Earth. Today’s Día de los Muertos celebration is a mash-up of pre-Hispanic religious rites and Christian feasts. It takes place on November 1 and 2—All Saints’ Day and All Souls’ Day on the Catholic calendar—around the time of the fall maize harvest.
